The Tradewind Recruitment COVID-19 Guide outlines the current guidance for working in schools.

As a people first business, our consultants will be taking every possible measure and precaution to protect yourself and children in the classroom.

Tradewind is operating as usual; delivering bespoke education recruitment solutions to primary, secondary and SEND schools across the UK.

We closely follow the advice from the DfE, Public Health England and the World Health Organisation and will continue to monitor the situation, therefore, this document may be subject to change.

Agency Staff Health & Safety; Agency and School joint responsibility

- Since the outbreak began, we have clearly and regularly communicated to our candidates that it is imperative to follow government advice on managing and mitigating the risk of infection, including if someone they live with has symptoms, or if they develop symptoms themselves.

Hygiene

- A greater emphasis on cleaning and hygiene practice is stressed as effective infection control measures (further detail throughout this document).

Your COVID-19 Policy and Risk Assessment

- We will obtain information from all of our clients about any known risks to health and safety and additionally, what steps the client has taken to prevent or control such risks.

- We will share this information with our candidates when they are offered the assignment and remind them to ask for it again upon arrival. Co-operation and communication between agency and school in supplying candidates is key to protecting candidates' and children's health and safety. We will continue to monitor the guidance and update our candidates as and when updates are available.

Living with COVID-19

Click here - This document sets out how the Government has and will continue to protect and support citizens by: enabling society and the economy to open up more quickly than many comparable countries; using vaccines; and supporting the National Health Service (NHS) and social care sector. It also sets out how England will move into a new phase of managing COVID-19. The Devolved Administrations will each set out how they will manage this transition in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

This document therefore also sets out how the Government will ensure resilience, maintaining contingency capabilities to deal with a range of possible scenarios.
