The Challenge

- Allianz had a huge amount of data centres (140 regional DC's across US, APAC and EMEA) which needed to be consolidated into 5 strategic ones, due to a huge investment in Cloud computing.
- After selecting an SI Partner (IBM), Allianz were worried about internal steering to ensure cost effectiveness as well as delivery, as this program was critical to the success of Allianz' Cloud journey.
- Allianz also needed to ensure that applications based within these datacentres, which could be moved to AWS or Azure, would be part of the "lift and shift" to Public Cloud as part of their TOM. Definition of this was required.

How we Supported

- Providing several expert technical resources across Network Engineering, Virtualization, Cloud Architecture and Service Management to have an internal control centre and ensure delivery from the SI partner
- Enabling visibility of critical path by providing Service and Program management experts within the financial industry to support the delivery of external services linked to DCC
- Ensuring availability for the experts provided after the program had finished by negotiating service contracts on specific business areas Allianz lacked internal resource, to ensure quality and continuity.
